

José Ramón Agustina Sanllehí

Professor of Criminal Law and Criminology at the Universitat Abat Oliba CEU. He obtained his doctorate from the Universitat Pompeu Fabra in 2008 with a thesis on crime prevention strategies in companies and the criminal protection of workers' privacy in their electronic communications.

Since his beginnings, he has combined his teaching and research work with professional practice, first as a Magistrate at the Provincial Court of Barcelona (2010-2013) and later as a Lawyer-Consultant at the firm Molins & Silva (2013-2019).

He has been a Visiting Scholar at various foreign, European and North American universities: Cambridge University (Cambridge, UK, 2007 and 2019), Pace University (New York, US, 2008), Rutgers University (Newark, US, 2009) and Texas State University (San Marcos, US, 2012). He has published more than 50 articles in indexed journals and four monographs, along with book chapters and other texts in collective works.

He has directed various postgraduate programs in compliance and cybercrime. In 2017 he launched and directed the first master's degree in cybercrime in Spain and Latin America. He currently directs the Master's Degree in Access to the Legal Profession at the Abat Oliba CEU University. He also directs the Actualidad Criminológica y Penal Collection at the BdeF-Edisofer publishing house and is a member of the editorial and review committee of various journals in his field of expertise. He has given lectures and courses as a guest professor at numerous Spanish and European universities, as well as in the USA, the United Kingdom, Chile, Argentina, Peru, Colombia, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Paraguay and the Dominican Republic, among other countries.

Research Lines

Among her areas of specialization, she stands out for her interest in cybercrimes against people (sexting, stalking and grooming) and cybervictimization of minors; crimes in companies, crime prevention strategies and compliance; sexual crimes and crimes against privacy; as well as the theory of crime and criminological theories.